8 UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
9 WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON
AT SEATTLE

10 UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

11 Plaintiff,

12 v.

13 C. MARVIN WILBUR,

14 Defendant.

CASE NO. CR09-191-MJP

ORDER DENYING DEFENDANT'S
MOTION FOR RELEASE PENDING APPEAL

16 This matter comes before the Court on Defendant Marvin Wilbur's motion for release
17 pending his appeal due to his medical condition. (Dkt. No. 237.) Having reviewed the motion, 18 the government's response (Dkt. No. 242), Defendant's reply (Dkt. No. 246), the government's 19 surreply (Dkt. No. 248), and all related papers, the Court DENIES the motion.

20 Background

21 Wilbur pled guilty to conspiracy to traffic in contraband cigarettes and conspiracy to 22 launder money in February 2010. (Dkt. No. 128 at 2.) Pending before the Ninth Circuit is his 23 second appeal. Arguing the Bureau of Prisons is unable to provide sufficient monitoring and 24

1 care to address his medical condition, he moves for release pending that appeal. (Dkt. No. 246 at 2 2.)

3 The parties do no dispute the facts pertinent to this motion. Wilbur's 2010 guilty plea 4 preserved his right to appeal certain pretrial orders. (Dkt. No. 128 at 12.) In March of 2012, the 5 Ninth Circuit issued a 27-page opinion affirming, in part, and reversing, in part, Defendant's 6 convictions. United States v. Wilbur, 674 F.3d 1160, 1182 (9th Cir. 2012). The case was 7 remanded back to this Court for re-sentencing. (Id.) Before remand, Wilbur sought additional 8 appellate review of certain due process arguments, filing a Petition for Rehearing with 9 Suggestion of Rehearing En Banc for the Ninth Circuit. (Ninth Circuit Dkt. No. 58-1.) By order
10 dated June 15, 2012, the panel denied Defendant's petition. (Ninth Circuit Dkt. No. 59.)

11 On remand, Wilbur filed a motion to vacate or in the alternative for leave to withdraw 12 conditional guilty plea. (Dkt. No. 207.) This Court denied the motion, finding the Ninth Circuit 13 had already considered and rejected the merits of Defendant's due process arguments, which 14 were the basis of the motion to withdraw or vacate the plea. (Dkt. No. 207 at 1.) This Court 15 then sentenced Wilbur to 12 months and one day of incarceration and restitution. (Dkt. No.
16 218.)

17 Wilbur reported to the Bureau of Prison's Federal Detention Center at SeaTac ("FDC").
18 Shortly after reporting to FDC, Defendant experienced medical problems that required 19 hospitalization from January 17, 2013 to March 12, 2013. (Dkt. No. 238.) After Wilbur was 20 discharged from a local hospital, the Bureau of Prisons designated Defendant as an inmate with 21 special medical conditions (a level 3). Wilbur will soon be transferred to an institution that can 22 meet his medical needs. (Dkt. No. 215.)

23 Analysis

1 A Court may order the release of a defendant pending appeal if that person was “found 2 guilty of an offense and sentenced to a term of imprisonment” and if the Court finds:

3 (A) by clear and convincing evidence that the person is not likely to flee or pose a 4 danger to the safety of any other person or the community if released under section 3142 (b) or (c) of this title; and

5 (B) that the appeal is not for the purpose of delay and raises a substantial question of law or fact likely to result in—

6 (i) reversal,

7 (ii) an order for a new trial,

8 (iii) a sentence that does not include a term of imprisonment, or

9 (iv) a reduced sentence to a term of imprisonment less than the total of the time already served plus the expected duration of the appeal process.

10 18 U.S.C. § 3143(b). An appeal raises a substantial issue of law or fact if the issue is one that is fairly debatable or fairly doubtful. United States v. Handy, 761 F.2d 1279, 1283 (9th Cir. 1985.)

11 The Defendant bears the burden of proof. United States v. Montoya, 908 F.2d 450, 451 (9th Cir.
1990).

12 Turning to the first requirement, the Court finds clear and convincing evidence Wilbur is 13 not a flight risk or a danger to the community: the record shows he is 75 years old man who is in 14 poor health and who needs near constant medical care and monitoring. (Dkt. Nos. 238, 239, 15 247.) Given these circumstances, combined with his lack of resources, the Court finds Wilbur is 16 unlikely to flee if released.

17 On the second requirement, Defendant contends his appeal raises a significant issue of 18 law because on remand, this Court should have applied the “fair and just” standard for 19 withdrawal of a guilty plea, rather than the more stringent “manifest injustice” standard. (Dkt.
20 No 191 at 3.) The Court disagrees and finds the issue is not one that is fairly debatable or 21 doubtful because Defendant’s position is based on a mischaracterization of the law in this 22 Circuit. Wilbur argues the case relied on by this Court, United States v. Nagra, 147 F.3d 875
23 (9th Cir. 1998) for the manifest unjust standard is no longer good law because it cited a case that 24

1 was over-ruled by United States v. Ruiz, 257 F.3d 1030 (9th Cir. 2001). He claims the Court
2 should have applied Ruiz. (Dkt. No. 191 at 4.)

3 Wilbur's contention does not raise a substantial issue of law for his appeal. First, Nagra
4 remains the law in this Circuit and has been favorably cited for the manifest injustice standard
5 since Ruiz. See e.g. United States v. James, 98 Fed.Appx. 648, 650 (9th Cir. 2004.) Second,
6 Nagra addressed the exact situation issue here: a motion to withdraw a guilty plea on remand 7 when "reversal did not undermine the validity of the conviction." Nagra, 147 F.3d at 880. The 8 Nagra Court explained, "there can be no manifest injustice in refusing to permit a defendant to 9 withdraw a guilty plea when there is no serious contention that the defendant is innocent of the 10 crimes charged." Id. Like Nagra, here, there is no serious debate Wilbur is guilty of the crimes 11 charged when the Ninth Circuit has upheld the validity of his conviction and rejected his due 12 process arguments that now underpin his motion to withdraw his guilty plea. The law in this 13 Circuit remains the more stringent manifest injustice standard when a defendant seeks to 14 withdraw a guilty plea on remand. Third, Wilbur wrongly identifies Ruiz as applying to the facts 15 of this case. In Ruiz, the defendant sought to withdraw his guilty plea before sentencing when he 16 learned of possibly exculpatory evidence. Id. at 1033. In contrast, here Wilbur sought to 17 withdraw his guilty plea after he had already been sentenced once, had appealed, the Ninth
18 Circuit, which ultimately upheld the basis for his conviction, and the case was simply remanded 19 for re-sentencing. The lower standard articulated in Ruiz, does not apply here.

20 Even assuming arguendo the Court did apply the wrong legal standard, Wilbur fails to 21 show appellate review of this error would likely result in reversal of his conviction, an order for a 22 new trial, a sentence that does not include a term of imprisonment, or a reduced sentence that is 23

1 less than the total appeal process. He makes no argument on this prerequisite for release under 2 18 U.S.C. § 3143(b).

3 Finally, the Court finds no basis to release Defendant when the Bureau of Prisons has 4 provided and will continue to provide necessary medical care. The record shows the Bureau of 5 Prisons responded to Defendant's medical needs by hospitalizing him, at considerable expense 6 when the FDC-SeaTac was unable to provide the necessary care. (Dkt. No. 251) And, because 7 the Bureau of Prisons is aware of Defendant's medical needs, it is in the best position to decide 8 now on his placement at an appropriate facility. (Id.) Finally, the Bureau of Prisons is in the 9 process of transferring Defendant to an institution that can provide the requisite level of medical 10 care.

11 Conclusion

12 Because Wilbur failed to show his appeal raises a substantial issue of law, which if 13 determined favorably to him will likely result in a reversal, a new trial, a sentence that does not 14 include a term of imprisonment or a reduced sentence, this Court DENIES his motion for release 15 pending appeal.
